MANCHESTER'S EXPECTATIONS.

MANCHESTER'S EXPECTATIONS.

The Duke and Duchess of Manchester are staying at Down Place, near Bray, taken from Colonel Halford, where an interesting event is shortly to be expected.

Should the Duchess present an heir to the house of Montague, it is understood that the Duke's relatives will make a settlement on the new Viscount Mandeville sufficient to allow a margin, after clearing off his father's debts, to rehabilitate ducal dignity. The Duke, it is understood, intends going seriously into politics, where his undoubted abilities insure his prominence.

MUSICAL CROWN PRINCE.

Items of court news sometimes show that even courtly newsgatherers may be misled, and all inside information about Kings and Princes is not exactly gospel. For instance, this week's Free Lance, under date of September 7, referring to the future movements of the German Crown Prince, says that, on leaving Scotland, the German heir apparent will go to Lowther Castle, where his imperial father's intimate friend, Lord Lonsdale, has laid out a fine sporting programme.

Unfortunately for this fine programme, the young Prince passed through London on September 2, and is now back in Germany.

Now that the Crown Prince of Germany has departed from these shores, there are, of course, the usual anecdotes being told, all very flattering, as is customary when any visitor of note has been here. The society papers seem untiring in telling how much beloved his imperial Highness made himself with all with whom he came in contact, what a splendid shot he proved to be, etc.

While it may be a pity to shatter the illusion, this is all sorry nonsense. The so-called meager portion of the younger son certainly was only $4,000 a year.

When Lord Robert Cecil married Miss Alderson and went to live in Mansfeld street, off Cavendish Square, he knew that, in the course of things, he would succeed to the Marquisate and Hatfield House. That he found his check from the Quarterly Review, the Saturday Review and the Standard a welcome addition to his income is likely enough, but he and his wife were of traceasticate simple tastes.

MEVER A FREE LANCE.

Mr. Beresford Hope, who married Lady Mildred Cecil. Lord Roberts's sister, founded the Saturday Review on a princely scale. The house of John Murray has always been proverbial as a good paymaster. Lord Robert Cecil's work was much appreciated. He soon became known as alsashing craftsmah, so much so, indeed, that Lord Clarendon is found writing that "Robert Cecil, in the Querterly, will pepper the Whigs abundantly."

As a leader writer on the Standard, he had as editor Doctor Stanley Lees Gifford, the father of his lifelong friend, the present Lord Chancellor, Lord Salisbury.

It is difficult to believe that Lord Balisbury ever had a manuscript rejected by any editor, but industriously circulated fiction always dies hard. Future generations, no doubt, will continue to think of Lord. NEVER A PREE LANCE.

It would seem that, on the initiative of the Chancellor, inquiries have been instituted among London brokers regarding the feasibility and probable effect of a 10 per cent import tax on diamonds. The annual output of the De Beers Syndicate is estimated at £20,000,000, and, with the added importation of diamonds from Brazil, would easily produce a sum 10 per cent of which

LONDON FILLING UP.

LONDON FILLING UP.

London is undoubtedly filling up again. Every day of the last week has seen a brightening up of the West End. By yesterday the fashionable thoroughfares were fairly alive with carriages.

The reason for this is the Doncaster race meeting, which takes place next week, with the race for the St. Leger on Wednesday, which, if the weather remains as fine as now, promises to be a very big affair.

Numeroum are the parties which have been made up for it. A great many well-known persons have traveled from the Continent and from the North, where they have been enjoying the grouse shooting, to be present at Doncaster.

It is unlikely now that London will be very dull till after the Newmarket meeting, in October, when there is every probability, I hear, that the King will be present. Inquiries have certainly been made as to his Majesty's accommodation there.

MUSICAL CROWN PRINCE.

Items of court news sometimes show that quired to pay its part like lace, wine and cigars."

The manager of a large diamond house,

Paris, says:

"The principal effect of such a movement on the part of the Government would be that diamonds would cease to come here from South Africa and other diamond producing countries, and go to the Continent instead. Nearly all diamonds come here in their rough state, direct from South Africa. It is only a little distance to Paris, Amsterdam and Berlin. The probable effect of the tax would be the removal of the head-quarters of the big diamond concerns to one of these cities.

"Patriotism goes a long way, but I am afraid it would not keep the diamond in this country if such a tax were Imposed.

"Provided that the collection of such a lot could be satisfactorily arranged, the honest trader would be sure to suffer not a little from swindlers. The wealthy Englishman, when he wishes to spend two or three thousand pounds on diamonds, will go to the Continent before he pays 10 per cent more for his goods. Wealthy Americans, who buy largely of English diamond houses, would likewise transfer their patronage to continental firms. A lot at the mines would be a different thing, but to tax the diamonds here. I think, would certainly kill the industry for this market."

During his recent visit to Lowther Castle, Earl Lonsdale engaged a large band, which played a large selection of music each evening. The programme, it may be mentioned, didn't include an undue proportion of German music. Perhaps with the idea of remedying the omission, the young Prince, on the last evening, borrowed a violin from one of the orchestra and played Handel's "Largo," it is said, in very creditable fashion, to the delight of everybody who heard his performance. Socialists Say France Will Degrade Herself by Honoring Him-Nationalists Declare He Is Coming to See M. Loubet-Anti-Semites See in It a Seeking After Condolence.

BY J. CORNELL

SPECIAL BY CABLE. Paris, Sept. 7 .- (Copyright, 1901, by the New York Herald Company.)-So rare are political events of importance that the French papers have reached the stage of imitating the American press, and are writing of future happenings, which is the height of actuality and news gathering. Consequently they continue to comment in advance upon the Czar's visit. The attitude of French politicians is infinitely curi

Let us pass them in review. To begin with, the Socialists and those of them who, having separated from the main party, have tumbled into anarchy, argue like Nihilists. The Czar, they say, is the representative of autocracy, of reaction of capitalism, and the persecutor of his people. As a consequence, France dishonors herself by bowing before him, and it be hooves the Socialists to protest.

THESE SEE A COMPLIMENT. As for the governmental Socialists, they thare the joy caused among Republicans by this great event of domestic politics which gives the Government considerable prestige by proving that the whole world loks upon France as an integral part of the European concert, and, therefore, possesses a republican and national Govern ment. Frenchmen who have no partisar name share this feeling.

The Reactionaries, Conservatives and Nationalists began by declaring that the Czar was coming, neither for M. Loubet nor for the Ministers, nor for the Parliament, but simply for the army-the army which he dissociated from the Government and even from the Ministry of War. Then, as the falsehood was too apparent, they changed their tactics. THESE GET BADLY MIXED.

Last year, at the banquet to all the May ors of France, they had asserted that M. Loubet alone had been acclaimed by the guests, and that the Ministers had received but little applause. To-day they are repeating the maneuver. According to them, M Loubet has done everything. He it was who conducted the negotiations for the Czar's visit. It was M. Loubet even who proposed to amnesty M. Deroulede and Of the Cabinet there is not a word, M

Loubet is the whole thing. This scheme, which is contrary to the real fact, would possibly have worked successfully in the case of M. Felix Faure, who believed his flatteries and could stand the grossest incense. It will not work with M. Loubet, who has never done anything without consulting his Cabinet, and who is aware of his indebtedness to M. Waldeck-Rousseau.

Her Husband, Count Alfred Wal-

dersee, Offered Governorship

of Alsace and Lorraine.

They make no effort to insinuate that the Crar esteems the army and despises the Government. They cooly aver that Nicolas II knows perfectly well what M. Loubet and his Ministers are worth, but that his imperial Majesty himself, being subjected to the capitalist and Hebrew regime, is glad to meet them and exchange a clasp of the hand and deforations with them; that, in a word, he dishonors himself by contact with the French Government, and that he is contributing to his own downfall by inspiring the Nihilists with new strength.

THESE SEE KRUGER'S CHANCE.

THESE SEE KRUGER'S CHANCE.

These sale krugers chance.

These latter are at the limit of the political gamut. They are on a level with the Socialists and Anarchists. Evidently the last are greater fools than the other, but they are less knavish and, consequently, preferable.

They remain the pure nationalists. These have adopted an amusing plan. They are offering advice to the Czar. They suggest what he should do in Paris. He should, for instance, take advantage of his visit here to receive Mr. Kruger and hear his plea and give him ald.

It is hard to imagine what restrains them from asking Nicholas II to request appointment to the post of vice president of the League of Patriots, of which M. Deroulede is president.

League of Patriots, of which M. Deroulede is president.

Then is the question of Paris. Pure Nationalists are masters of the Municipal Council of Paris, and for that reason, possibly, the Czar will not visit Paris. It is indeed possible that the Russtan monarch, coming to see M. Loubet, would forget to have presented to him those who received M. Loubet with insults and cabbage stalks.

THESE FEAR AN IMPRUDENCE.

THESE FEAR AN IMPRUDENCE.

The Nationalists are urging the Czar not to commit such a fearful imprudence, and they have already reached the point of cailing upon the tradespeople of Paris to remember it will be the fault of the Government if the Czar does not come.

The peculiar part of it is that these cruditles are said and written by men over 7 years of age—who have, in fact, reached the age of reason, but have passed it by a great way.

He is becoming popular not only with the lay population, which is easily captured, but with the army, whose officers, removed from the influence of journalistic calumnies, are beginning to do justice to his endeavors, as they see men of modesty and of merit, with no family or social "pull," promoted without recourse to intrigue.

As was to be expected, these reports were formuly denied.

THESE ENCOURAGE STRIFE.

The object desired by the opposition is to create a misunderstanding between those two men and set up the Eiysee against the Place Benuveau. This plan is too childish to have the least chance of success M. Waldeck-Rousseau is not jealous of M. Loubet; M. Loubet is grateful to M. Waldeck-Rousseau. Those who know both have no fears in this regard.

The anti-Semites have another plan, was to be expected, these reports were formuly denied.

And as I have mentioned the religious orders, I wish to confirm a plece of news that I gave some time ago, namely, that the Dominicans, to which order Pere Lacordaire and Pere Didon belonged, have applied to the Ministry of the Interior for authorization to remain in France.

Many other congregations are seeking a retreat in other countries of Europe, notably in Protestant countries.

This is, to say the least, odd; and it is difficult to guess where or at what they will stop.
